

When I was growing up, my family bought unpasteurized milk from a dairy farm. What I vividly remember is how the cream really did rise to the top of the jar. And the same could be said for the legions of IT specialists out there - some distinguish themselves such that they stand out above the masses. One such person is Craig Wiggins of Keystone Technical. Craig has been working for the North Penn Chamber several years now, and his low key and easy going approach to our computer snafus has taken a lot of stress out of our dealing with computer "issues." I would highly recommend Craig to any small business.
